11:21 PM me: just watched the video, it was great Anonymous: mark was really on my side, made it pretty easy for me me: I'll definitely post that along with my old radio interview on Wikileaks and a discussion about you and them Anonymous: great man me: yeah, and you did a very solid job of making the case that needs to be made incidentally 11:22 PM I was on Russia Today over the summer and pulled a prank on them by talking about the FSB false flag bombings before they cut me off Anonymous: hah i wasnt sure if i wanted to burn a bridge or not but i was cut off too soon me: I don't get invited back on any TV outlet well, no Anonymous: I was going to yell SAN DIMAS HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL RULES but they cut me off at the end :P
me: you were dealing with a legitimate network

they find it very interesting 11:29 PM Anonymous: i love the john rain series me: well, Eisler knows who you are Anonymous: ive been waiting a long time for a new book in the series me: I'll let him know Anonymous: i like about 5 authors total and he is on the list me: Hastings is also a fan, he apparently read five of his books earlier in the year I haven't had a chance yet to read one Anonymous: a bit of a strange list, but he is right there with terry pratchett, neil gaiman, and douglas adams 11:30 PM the John Rain books are really well done, and the story really lends itself to a series awesome

11:31 PM You know how many times I have been told to write a book about all this crap?
it happens about once a week it seems 11:32 PM me: yeah, I feel you, man just sent an e-mail to Eisler noting you love his books Anonymous: I do love hastings reporting nice always nice to make sure someone knows you enjoy their work 11:33 PM me: yeah. Eisler's a fantastic guy, he actually wrote me in response to a Vanity Fair article I did and has recently set me up with a top agent for my next book 11:34 PM Anonymous: wow, thats awesome man 11:35 PM me: if you do decide to pursue any writing projects, let me know

11:37 PM we're really in a position to do some incredible work in both improving science journalism and Africa development, along with our blogger network and anarcho-technocratic think-tank, both of which operate on a communicational schematic we've designed to expand perpetually without watering down average participant quality
